CGIAR AT CBD COP13

13th meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity

An overview of CGIAR activities at CBD COP13
Cancun, Mexico - December, 2016

Mainstreaming the Conservation and Sustainable Use of Biodiversity for Well-Being

Biodiversity is vitally important to agriculture, food and nutrition security as well as to the integrity of the natural resources upon which agriculture depends.

Biological diversity at the genetic, species, farm, and landscape levels is essential to increasing food security, improving health and nutrition, and enhancing resilience and adaptation to climate change, as well as to sustainably manage agricultural and forest landscapes.

CGIAR research aligns with many of the actions mentioned in the Cancun Declaration on Mainstreaming the Conservation and Sustainable Use of Biodiversity for Wellbeing.

As the world’s leading global agricultural research partnership, CGIAR conducts research in sustainable agriculture, livestock, fisheries and forestry, climate adaptation, nutrition, policies, and markets as well as the sustainable management of land, water and ecosystems, with three strategic objectives: to reduce poverty; improve food and nutrition security; and improve natural resources and ecosystem services.
